Political theology is a term which has been used in discussion of the ways in which theological concepts or ways of thinking relate to politics. The term political theology is often used to denote religious thought about political principled questions. Scholars such as Carl Schmitt use it to denote religious concepts that were secularized and thus became key political concepts.

In a previous post, I suggested that Old High Churchman William Jacobson's 1840 sermon on the day of thanksgiving for the deliverance of Queen Victoria from an assassination attempt was evidence of a reassertion of High Church political theology in the changed context following the 'constitutional revolution' of 1828-32. Another example of this can be found in Jacobson's 1847 sermon for 20th ...

I am in the process of reading carefully through the works of the Joseph Stalin – or the ‘man of steel’, as he became known through his revolutionary code name. When I mention the fact that I am reading Stalin’s rather extensive works, people look surprised – surprised not because I am actually reading Stalin, but because they usually do not realise he wrote anything at all.

Political Theology of 1922 and Derrida's Force of Law of 1989. The article examines another paradigm, that of Ernesto Laclau. The article concludes that only a non-presentable idea of God as a negative fundament allows for a non-authoritarian political idea. But this non-presentable character is only made possible by revolutionary politics.
